Welcome to the Conference

We would like to welcome you to the World Labor Conference, which is being held to celebrate the 20th anniversary of the IZA Institute of Labor Economics. IZA was created in 1998 with a generous endowment from the Deutsche Post Stiftung. Initially housed in the former legation of the State of Bremen to the federal government in Bonn, the institute has since expanded physically to embrace two adjacent buildings.

Over the 20 years of its existence, IZA has issued nearly 12,000 Discussion Papers, touching on all areas of labor economics and labor issues, but also including studies dealing with appropriate statistical measurement, macroeconomic labor issues and many other areas related to labor. The IZA network of Research Fellows and Affiliates contains over 1,500 members from more than 60 countries. It includes many labor economists, but also specialists in labor issues in sociology and labor policy more generally.

Each year IZA has held or co-sponsored around 30 conferences covering such areas as education, migration, program evaluation, environmental issues and many others. It has also held an annual meeting, its Transatlantic Conference, bringing together one dozen researchers from each side of the Atlantic to exchange ideas and present their research. At the IZA Summer School, each year around 30 advanced European Ph.D. students discuss each other's research, hear lectures on cutting-edge topics by world-renowned scholars, and, moreover, become acquainted with each other, fostering a cadre of European scholars of the next generation.

It seemed appropriate to commemorate these achievements by holding a large conference open to researchers from over the world. Accordingly, in Fall 2017 a Call for Abstracts was disseminated, soliciting proposals for research papers to be presented at the Conference. Over 600 submissions were received for the 192 slots that were planned. The abstracts were parceled out to the IZA Program Directors and others who organize conferences for IZA: Katharine Abraham, Susan Houseman, Dan Black, George Borjas, Michael Burda, Pierre Cahuc, Deborah Cobb-Clark, Olivier Deschenes, Armin Falk, Gary Fields, Hartmut Lehmann, Gerard Pfann, Gerard van den Berg, Marco Caliendo, and Ian Walker made the difficult decisions about which papers to include in the Conference.

The 192 papers that were selected have been organized into 48 sessions, with eight sessions taking place in each of six time slots (three on Thursday, 28 June, and three on Friday, 29 June). In scheduling the sessions, we have structured the program to ensure little overlap in subjects within the same time slot, so that attendees can enjoy as many papers as possible within their own areas of specialized interest.

The World Labor Conference is also the venue for awarding the biennial IZA Prize in Labor Economics. It will be presented formally at a banquet on the evening of Thursday, 28 June, to this year's recipient, Joseph Altonji of Yale University. The award honors Professor Altonji's seminal contributions to the economic analysis of labor supply, family economics and discrimination.

We wish to thank all those who contributed for their commitment to making this conference possible, especially Ulrike Maurer and her event management team, who have done a tremendous job to ensure that everything goes smoothly. It is now up to you, the participants, to make the World Labor Conference a big success in terms of scientific exchange and establishing new ideas. We hope you will witness the beginning of a great new tradition!

Scientific Committee

Hilmar Schneider

Hilmar Schneider rejoined IZA in March 2016. Between 2013 and 2016, he was the Director of the Luxembourg Institute of Socio-Economic Research (LISER) after having served 12 years at IZA as Director of Labor Policy. In 2014, he was appointed a honorary professor at the Faculty of Language and Literature, Humanities, Arts and Education of the University of Luxembourg.

Hilmar Schneider studied Social Sciences and Economics at the University of Frankfurt/Main. After finishing his diploma as a Social Scientist he worked from 1983 to 1987 as a research assistant in the special collaborative program “Microanalytic foundations of social policy”. He received his doctoral degree in 1987 with a dissertation on the determinants of unemployment duration. Then he held an assistant professorship from 1987 to 1993 in the department of economics at the university of Frankfurt/Main, giving lectures in statistics, econometrics and labor economy. In 1994, he became head of the labor market department of the Halle Institute for Economic Research. Among else within this activity, he worked as a visiting scholar at the World Economy Laboratory at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1998. His successful acting at the interface between economic research and policy advice is well documented by numerous research reports, journal articles and presence in the media. Moreover, he advises the German government, e.g. from 2007 to 2012 as a member of the German Census Commission. From 2006 to 2008 he acted as a member of the National Council for Social and Economic Data. In 2011 and 2012 he operated as a principal expert for the Chancellor’s dialogue on the Future of Germany.

Besides labor policy, his main research emphases comprise problems of social protection, wage policy and demography. His most important publications cover papers about the labor market effects of replacement wages, the labor market perspectives of East Germany, the efficiency of active labor policy in the transformation process, and the welfare state perspectives of Europe.

Daniel S. Hamermesh

Daniel S. Hamermesh is Distinguished Scholar, Barnard College, Professor Emeritus, Royal Holloway University of London, and Sue Killam Professor Emeritus at the University of Texas at Austin and his A.B. is from the University of Chicago (1965), his Ph.D. from Yale (1969). He taught from 1969–73 at Princeton, from 1973–93 at Michigan State, from 2009–12 at Maastricht University, and has held visiting professorships in the United States, Europe, Australia and Asia. He is a Fellow of the Econometric Society, a research associate of the National Bureau of Economic Research, and was President of the Society of Labor Economists in 2001. In 2013 that Society gave him the Mincer Award for Lifetime Contributions; he was awarded the IZA Labor Prize; and he received the John R. Commons Award from Omicron Delta Epsilon.

He authored Labor Demand, The Economics of Work and Pay, Economics Is Everywhere, Beauty Pays, and a wide array of articles in labor economics in the leading general and specialized economics journals.

His research concentrates on time use, labor demand, discrimination, social insurance programs (particularly unemployment insurance), and unusual applications of labor economics (to suicide, sleep and beauty).

He joined IZA as a research fellow in July 1998. From December 2001 until July 2008, he was IZA Program Director for the institute’s research program “The Future of Labor.” He served as IZA Director of Research from August 2008 until January 2009.

Social Media Guidelines

Social media is a great way to share research and conference impressions with a wider audience. We encourage you to tweet about the conference using the hashtag #izawlc. Since norms around the use of social media in academic environments and scientific culture have not reached consensus, we have put together a few guidelines and recommendations.

For Presenters

- Include your Twitter handle on the title slide.
- Let your audience know whether any of your findings should not be shared because they are very preliminary or proprietary.
- Be happy that the audience is tweeting! “Sharing is caring” – and studies have shown that social media coverage increases downloads and citations.

For the Audience

- Include the hashtag #izawlc and reference the presenter and their affiliation.
- Be respectful of the presenter and ask for permission before posting images of people and figures/tables with data.
- Add links to publications and professional websites wherever possible and appropriate.
- Have fun! Social media is meant to be positive experience for everyone. It’s about engaging people beyond the conference itself and positive community building.

Evidence-based policy making

Evidence-based policy making

IZA World of Labor is an online platform that provides policy analysts, journalists, academics and the interested public with relevant and concise information on labor market topics. Based on the latest research, it provides current thinking on labor markets worldwide in a clear and accessible style. IZA World of Labor aims to support evidence-based policy making and increase awareness of labor market issues.

The QR code will take you to a PDF volume reflecting the broad range of topics covered by IZA World of Labor. The volume contains all one-pagers published between May 2014 and April 2018.

We are very grateful for the continuous support of our authors, editors, and reviewers who made this ambitious project possible. We would also like to thank our publisher Bloomsbury Publishing Plc for a trustful and efficient collaboration.

IZA Prize in Labor Economics 2018

About the IZA Prize

A sound understanding of problems in labor economics has proven ever more important in light of the adjustment processes that are currently taking place in the international labor markets. In order to account for this trend, the Institute of Labor Economics - with generous support from the Deutsche Post Foundation - has created the "IZA Prize in Labor Economics". This now biennial Prize is awarded for outstanding academic achievement in the field of labor economics. It is meant to stimulate research that tries to find answers to the important labor market policy questions of our time. In November 2002 the IZA Prize was awarded for the first time.

As members of our network, all IZA Research Fellows and Affiliates are entitled to nominate candidates for the Prize. The decision is made by the IZA Prize Committee, which consists of distinguished economists.

The IZA Prize in Labor Economics underscores the central importance of labor market research in shaping the "Future of Labor."

Joseph G. Altonji (Yale University and IZA)

2018 Laureate

Joseph G. Altonji is currently the Thomas DeWitt Cuyler Professor of Economics at Yale. He previously held faculty positions at Columbia and Northwestern and has served as a visiting professor at Princeton and Harvard. Altonji specializes in labor economics and applied econometrics.

The 2018 IZA Prize in Labor Economics is awarded to Joseph G. Altonji for his seminal contributions to the economic analysis of labor supply, family economics and discrimination. His contributions have shaped the understanding of how households decide on their labor supply under fluctuating business cycles and changing labor markets, whether the family is the relevant unit of economic decision making, and what the mechanisms behind labor market discrimination are. An overarching theme of his work is that even the most insightful and fundamental theoretical advances must be supported by rigorous empirical evidence. This has led him to provide regular improvements to the econometric toolbox.

He joined IZA as a Research Fellow in May 2001.

Acceptance Speech by Joseph G. Altonji (Yale University and IZA).

About the Museum for Communication

Founded in 1872 by the Postmaster General of the German Empire, the Museum for Communication Berlin is regarded as the world's oldest postal museum. It unites the past, present and future under one roof. Its permanent exhibition offers vivid insights into the origins, development and future of the information society. A series of attractive temporary exhibitions showcases the many different aspects of communication.

The museum was badly damaged during wartime bombing raids on Berlin. In the 1990s, after the Fall of the Berlin Wall, a modern plan was developed for restoring the entire museum building. The original structures were preserved and reconstructions only carried out where historic designs were available. The heart of the building is the light-flooded central atrium surrounded by a series of galleries – the perfect venue for IZA's anniversary celebrations and the IZA Prize banquet, not least given that IZA was initiated by the Deutsche Post Foundation.

We invite all presenting authors of the IZA World Labor Conference to celebrate with us and make this special occasion an unforgettable experience!
