Job description
Research associates will engage in self-directed research that has the potential to be published in top journals, and get involved in our network activities and in shared projects of the institute. Team spirit and active participation in the thriving intellectual environment of IZA are essential.

The appointment is for up to 6 years: initially for 3 years, with a possibility of renewal for 3 more years. The positions offer a competitive compensation package plus a travel budget, and no teaching obligations. However, teaching opportunities at one of the local universities are available upon interest.

Our research staff is a productive blend of established labor economists and promising young academics. IZA has an active weekly seminar series attracting renowned international labor economists and hosts many well-regarded labor economics workshops and conferences.

Your application
If you are interested in one of the positions, please submit a cover letter explaining your motivation, a curriculum vitae, a completed research paper, a research statement and 3 letters of reference by November 15, 2020. We will conduct online interviews in December 2020 due to the continued uncertainties related to the potential spread of COVID-19.

The Institute
IZA is a bridge builder for research in labor economics. We narrow the distance between science and society, and transport relevant knowledge about the working world to the general public, political actors and economic players. IZA is the hub of a global network of scholars who work with us to create a sound economic understanding of how labor markets work and how labor market policies perform. We contribute to the future of labor research by supporting young scholars on their paths to becoming tomorrow’s leading academics.
